CHANGES AT THE GAS HOUSE.

Honry P. Barbehenn Retiros After Forty-Three Years Service With the Company.

For forty-three years the name of Henry P. Barbehenn has been associated with the Gas Company that it has seemed that he was part of the plant, so it came as a surprise to learn last week that his connection with the company had come to an end. For years he practically represented the plant, while Superintendent is name did all other labor connected with a suo heartburn, industriess, flattilency, headlache, by the Communion: At 2 p. m. a platearth operation of the plant and it was a malaria, fevor and ague back of it. the business and as he grew up in years and less able to stand the fatigue of the laborer connected with the place they took his place, his son, George W. Barbehen: becoming Superintendent and Edward Barbehenn a laborer at the plant. All the time the father however continued to work for the company to the extent of his ability. Several years ago the control of th stock of the company passed to York people but later came back and is now controlled locally. For some time there has been unpleasantness brawing, which in the first instance resulted in Geo. W. Barbehenn resigning as Superintendent and accepting a similar position with the gas company of Martinsburg, W. Va. Scon after this it is said Edward Barbehenn re mested an morense of wages saying he was offered better wages to work at the Martinsburg plant. Following this denand came the retirement of Edward Barbehenn and his father Henry P. Barbettern from service with the Gas Company. The former has accepted the position at Martinaburg. Charles Harr is the night operator a operator under Allen B. Plank, Superin

There are two sets of buildings on the place and the property can be easily divided into two separate tracts. The first set of buildings consist of a large 2-story brick house, targe bank barn, wagon shed and other outbuildings; the second consists of a 2-story frame house, old style barn and outbuildings. The property can be bought as a whole or in separate tracts of about 65 seres and about 147 acres, on reasonable terms. For particulars address.

"Kid" Stark was twenty-five, bis wife forty, when they bought the Peach' Orchard farm. The wife had money, Mrs. Stark seemed to have something? of a roving disposition, while her hushand was as fond of quiet as an old man. She would go away, remaining absent sometimes for a few weeks ometimes a few months. She had a head for business and the faculty of keeping her affairs to herself. When she returned it was noticed at the bank where she kept an account that the usually had money to deposit. One evening after dark Stark drove his wife to the station, and when he returned several men who had called at the farm to win his vote for a commuch depressed. Indeed they found it impossible to get his attention to the matter about which they had called. When four months passed and Mrs. Stack that not return the wanging tongues started in for a clatter, which grew louder and louder, then subsided into mysterious whisperings. A year passed and no return of the wanderer. Two years after Mrs. Stork's departure Stark, who had not touched any money deposited in his wife's name, presented a cheek bearing her signature for $1,000. But the bank offithat he had murdered his wife and believed that he would not be satisfied till be had appropriated all her funds, serutinized the check and pronounced it a forgery. Stark was arrested for

The expert on cross examination explained to the court that there were certain letters in the signature which were made very differently by Stark and his wife, the expert stating that Stark in trying to change the mode of making these let-ters had made a lamentable failure. Stark was convicted, and, since every-body believed that he had killed lils wife, the Judge gave him a sentence of twenty years' imprisonment.

one not only that Stark had murdered his wife, but that there was very good evidence at hand to prove it. There were people who had been as obstinate with regard to Stark's innocence as the Wagging tongues had been in againtaining his guilt. These people now gave up in the face of the evidence and long before the trial public opinion had pro-nounced him guilty. Everything conpired to bring him to inside. He had been convicted of forging his wife's name to get her money, the circumstantial evalence all pointed to her murder, the prosecuting attorney had every inducement to convict him, the police were destrous of closing the mystery and stopping the normarings under

The exhamed cloth ug was proved by competent witnesseto have been that worn by Mrs. Stark when she disappeared. These were the principal circumstances proving Stark's guill, though there were many minor ones. The prosecuting attorney made a nasterly effort, in which he scathingly sferred to the prisoner having marraed this thrifty woman to get her mon-ey and had mandered her in order to get it the quicker. The prisoner sat with a dizzel look on his face that ex-perienced court officials pronounced the same as that universally worn by those guilty of a great crime. Mrs. Stark had gone abroad on a business venture. She had written her husband one letter, which had miscarried, then had entered a barbarous country, where she was detained on a false charge with a view to appropriating considerable funds she had with her. Then she had the bad luck to be shipwrecked and was obliged to sail around the globe before getting home. afraid when this man's voice and eyes took on their present tone -- of herself perhaps, more than anything else. "Since I have inken up illustrating I have to use the minutes as well as the hours, so as to keep up my reporting."

"Are you going to do reporting this winter? It is such hard, grinding work for a woman, Bessie, I linie to see you do it, and with all my heart I wish I had the power to say you shall not."

She looked at him stendily. "To you know that sometimes you are almost Impudent? Yes, I must do reporting this winter. It will be a year at least before I can give it up for more congenial employment. Diastrating does not pay quite well enough yet to take care of the Stuarts financially.
